SUMMARY

An increasing body of literature has emerged on spirituality and spiritual care in a variety of acute, chronic and palliative care nursing settings. However, there is a paucity of research into spirituality in military nursing populations. The literature confirmed the continuing lack of a unified definition of spirituality. Further, it identified that spirituality is positively associated with resilience in the face of adversity.

This work addressed an identified gap in the literature by seeking to understand how Australian military nurses experienced spirituality and spiritual care in a unique deployed operational context. The researcher conducted phenomenological interviews of ten Australian military nurses, underpinned by the Philosophical Hermeneutics of Gadamer.

The analysis indicated that family and community support the spiritual needs of military personnel when at home and transfer that responsibility to the military family when deployed.

A new model of spiritual care was developed based on the findings of study and incorporated elements of an earlier model of spirituality by the researcher. The model was produced to improve the awareness and delivery of spiritual care of Australian military nurses on deployment.

The study confirmed the centrality of the military nurse, throughout the continuum of deployment (pre-deployment, deployment and post-deployment), to the delivery of spiritual care. Further, it identified the reciprocal nature of spiritual care that assisted the nurse to also cope with the stressors of deployment.

Having identified the dangers and other challenges that deployed military operations present to the provision of spiritual nursing care, the research suggested that spirituality and spiritual care may provide positive benefits in protecting against the long-term psychological, emotional and spiritual impacts of military service on deployed operations.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I owe a great debt of gratitude to a number of people who have assisted me throughout this journey. Firstly, to the nurses who gave willingly and openly of their experiences I feel truly humbled that you let me capture your stories. This research would not have been possible without your input.

To my supervisors, Associate Professor Ann Harrington and Professor Sally Borbasi. Ann, your guidance, friendship and unwavering support through both this journey and my previous Master's Degree has been invaluable. You have consistently challenged my thinking, provided sage advice and shown great forbearance. Sally, your mentorship, encouragement and support helped me to focus my thinking and remain positive through the challenging times. Thank you both for "staying the course" with me.

To my family and friends who have shared this journey with me. I would not have been able to arrive at this point without your boundless love, support and encouragement. My wife Catherine, you are a constant source of inspiration and are my rock. My daughter Sarah-Jane, your infectious enthusiasm, willing assistance and ability to laugh at my attempts at humour are treasured. Finally, I thank God who, through Christ, has always walked beside me, held me when I have stumbled and carried me safely throughout my life.
